In 2016, "African swine fever virus" (ASFV) was first detected in China. ASFV is a highly contagious disease that affects pigs and wild boars. It is caused by a virus that is transmitted through direct contact with infected animals or their secretions. The disease has a high mortality rate and can cause significant economic losses for pig farmers. In 2018, the World Health Organization (WHO) reported that ASFV had spread to several other countries, including Georgia, Armenia, Azerbaijan, and Russia. This outbreak has raised concerns about the potential for the disease to spread to other parts of the world, particularly in Asia and Africa. The WHO is currently working to contain the outbreak and prevent further spread.
